The Colorado Springs Art Guild

Artist Teri Atkins Brown

We welcome Teri Atkins Brown, our first featured demo artist for 2017, on January 31st at 7 p.m.

Growing up in the Cherokee National Forest, Teri Atkins Brown now splits her time between the Rocky and Smoky Mountains. As a painter and photographer she has won over 120 awards for her artworks and has been accepted into over 250 juried shows. With her first programming degree at 18, she graduated at the top of her interior architecture & design program at University of Tennessee. Previously working for a top interior design firm, a New York Times-owned paper, designing TV sets for a Washington Post owned cable station and as a graphic designer for several Midwest newspapers, she now serves as President of the Colorado Springs Art Guild.

Teri was a member of the Jackson Art Association, Tenn. Watercolor Society, Southern Watercolor Society and now PPWS, a member or leader in 16 art &

photo groups in total. She created a rural art group in Tennessee which had gained 150 members in its first year. She was nominated for the Tennessee Governor's Award for Arts Leadership through her activity and passion for the arts in Western

Buffalo Kaplinski

Buffalo is considered a master watercolorist by many. His color choices have been in question by many. This however has not deterred his direction. He studied with the famed master, Irving Shapiro in Chicago at the American Academy of Art, an art school noted for turning out great illustrators. Shapiro was an American Watercolor Society member and had a conservative color palette, he did not like the "Buffalo Colors". Shapiro taught the use of the #8 red sable brush and was an excellent teacher in his approach to watercolors.

Kaplinski was infected with the Plein Air Virus & continues today with that challenge. He continues to work in his favorite states: Colorado, Utah and Arizona with focused plein air locations of Canyonlands, Arches, Canyon de Chelly, Zion, and Mesa Verde. "Being able to live and paint in Colorado is a great blessing. The Lord put me here."

Dan Rich

Dan has spent over 40 years as an entrepreneur in publishing, launching several publishing companies and turning around others. He started out launching NavPress, a book and magazine house for The Navigators, launching a book publisher, WaterBrook Press for Random House and a turn-around for David C Cook book and curriculum publisher.

Early on, Dan found that publishing allowed him to utilize his creative skills in packaging, branding and marketing. This creative strength set his companies apart from the competition. They collected numerous national and regional awards for graphics, art, creative packaging and advertising excellence. Many of the books he published stayed perpetually on the best sellers lists, including the New York Times for years.

Dan retired in 2015 and became a full-time artist. His current focus is on soft pastels and exploring all subject matter. Featuring both studio and plein air works while seeing how his pastels influence his work in acrylic and oils.

Painting Simplified
Oil/Acrylic, all levels

Thursdays, 9 a.m. - 11:30 am
February 16, 23
March 2, 9, 16, 23

Begin each class with a concept or an idea then proceed to painting. Students paint what they want. The main emphasis is simplifying the entire structure of the painting. The quality of a painting lies in the appropriate use of contrast. This will be fun and non-threatening. No matter how much or little you have painted you will come away with improved skill. Minimal supplies because of the limited palette (see list on the website, www.sheppardartinstitute.org).

Finding the Truth
Graphite Pencil, all levels

Thursdays, 1 p.m. - 3:30 pm
February 16, 23
March 2, 9, 16, 23

Begin a journey with the graphite pencil. Discover the unusual ways to see and think differently, enabling you to easily approach the process of drawing. Objectives will include, learning applications of materials and supplies, understanding shapes, value, proportion and perspective. Lessons will include exciting lecture, hands on activities and accommodate diverse learning methods of students in all skill levels.

Casey Klahn & Ken Elliott

May 15-18, 2017

Casey Klahn and Ken Elliott will be holding a 4-day intensive art workshop at my home / studio in Castle Rock, CO (Denver metro). kencelliott@gmail.com

This class is almost at the limit of 8 students, $690 each. If this class fills, a second class will be held following weekend.

Open to artists in all media. This is a two-instructor workshop for artists wanting to make advancements in their techniques and strategies. Casey and Ken will have ample time to give very focused attention to individuals and offer a number of provoking ideas to the group.

Additionally, Ken will present simple Photoshop techniques for taking your works to the next level and creating better pathways for finishing your artworks. You will be given a Photoshop instruction guide and have access to Ken's personal photo file of over 1500 inspiring images by various artists. Look for a new PPWS/WC workshop in June.
